Why do we need a policy?

Education settings have always used photographs as a way of highlighting success, celebrating achievements or seeking publicity for fundraising. Families enjoy seeing their loved ones in print or online and we want to ensure that everyone can continue to enjoy these activities safely. However, parents/carers need to be aware that placing any identifying information in the public domain has risks and need to understand these issues to give properly considered consent.

So, what are the risks?

The most highly publicised and worrying risk is that a child who appears in the press or online may become of interest to a sex offender. Locating people through the internet has become extremely easy, so if there is a picture and the name of an education setting together with the full name of a child, it could be possible to find out the child's address or work out their likely route to and from the setting. Additionally, it must be recognised that images of children can easily be copied, manipulated or changed once they are published. There are also other specific groups of children, staff and families whose safety could be put at risk if identified online, for example, those fleeing domestic abuse. To limit these risks, we will take appropriate steps, as outlined in the attached consent form and in our image use policy, to safeguard children and our wider community.

Isn't this just scaremongering?

Sadly not. There have been cases of families receiving unwelcome phone calls or visits following appearances in the press or online. However, this is rare, so it is important to have a sense of proportion; we want to celebrate success and achievement, but parents must be aware of risks to make an informed decision.

What about our official website or other online channels?

Concerns about identification and images being manipulated apply our controlled websites and social media platforms; we will try to copy protect images we share and will use lower quality images on our website and social media channels, but this can be bypassed.

I want to do my own recording of a school play or event is this okay?

Taking pictures or recordings of your own children for your own personal use is okay. The difficulty arises when other children are also filmed, and those images are then shared online. It is important to be aware that some members of our community may be vulnerable or at risk so must not have their image shared online. You may not know who is at risk, so we need everyone's support to protect our community. It's important to role model positive behaviour for children, so please check before posting any images online which contain children other than your own. We also ask you do not copy or share images from our website or other channels, without appropriate permission.
